

Agustina Diaz Valdez - Argentina - World Farmers Organization

I am 28 years old; I am a Veterinary Doctor graduated from the University of El Salvador in the Province of Buenos Aires, and I have a tertiary degree in Rural Administration. I was born in the city of Rio Gallegos, province of Santa Cruz, and a few days later, I moved to the farm with my entire family. I come from a family of livestock producers, focused on sheep farming. For the past 29 years, in addition to our own farm, my father has managed one of the largest sheep farms in the country, dedicated to breeding sheep, where they implement good livestock practices, use certified organic products, and maintain proper pasture management (RWS). In 2014, I moved to the city of Buenos Aires where I began my university studies and joined the Ateneo of the Argentine Rural Society, a space for the training of future agricultural leaders. I participated there for 8 years, and after completing my presidency of the Ateneo, I decided to focus on my university career. Currently, I work for a rural services company dedicated to the buying and selling of cattle, buffalo, horse, and farms.
